

Chantel A. Gray, MD is a graduate of the University of Toledo College of Medicine. She completed her internal medicine internship at Summa Health, followed by anesthesiology residency at Temple University. Her critical care fellowship training was at the Cleveland Clinic, and she is double board certified by the American Board of Anesthesiology.

Dr. Gray joined the Department of Anesthesiology at The Ohio State University as an Assistant Professor in 2017. Clinically, her practice includes caring for patients in the operating room, as well as the care of the critically ill in the surgical and cardiovascular intensive care units. She currently serves as the Assistant Director of Faculty Development for the Division of Critical Care, as well as the faculty liaison for the Cardiothoracic and Vascular Surgery Advanced Practice Providers.

Dr. Gray's research interests include post ICU survivorship and care, and she is trained as a facilitator for a newly created Serious Illness Conversation Program, an initiative designed to equip clinicians with formalized communication skills to match patient care to patient values.
