

I am an Anesthesiologist-Intensivist at The Ohio State University Wexner Medical Center. My osteopathic degree was obtained at West Virginia School of Osteopathic Medicine. I trained at Medical College of Wisconsin and Vanderbilt University Medical Center and have been in practice for 5 years. I am boarded in anesthesiology, critical care, and critical care echocardiography. Professionally, my interests revolve around cardiovascular intensive care, specifically the role of surface ultrasound and point-of-care ultrasonography in critical care. Additionally, I have been studying right ventricular function in patients on VV ECMO during the pandemic. Finally, outside of work I enjoy cooking, gardening, and exercising
